

Access to the internet has become necessary to fully participate in society. But for many of our neighbors in predominantly Black and Brown communities on the city's South and West sides, the lack of broadband has been an ongoing issue and the COVID-19 crisis highlighted the city's digital equity divide. That's why United Way of Metro Chicago is proud to partner with Mayor Lightfoot, CPS, Kids First Chicago, and others to launch Chicago Connected.

Closing Chicago's Digital Divide

1 in 5 children in Chicago lack access to high speed internet.

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

- ✓ 100,000+ Students
- ✓ Free High-Speed Internet
- ✓ Four Year Program
- ✓ Skills Development Training

LEARN MORE

For more information about the program and eligibility requirements, visit cps.edu/chicagoconnected

Chicago Connected is a groundbreaking program created to ensure students are equipped to participate in remote learning and increase their digital literacy. The program is one of the largest and longest-term efforts to provide households with high-speed internet for four years by directly paying for internet service for families that are most in need, leveraging Community-Based Organizations (CBOs) to support enrollment in the program, and providing skills development training.

This groundbreaking initiative is generously funded by Chicago's philanthropic community who has raised $47 million for this effort.

Citadel • Crown Family Philanthropies • Chicago Community COVID-19 Response Fund • ITW Pritzker Traubert Foundation • President Barack Obama & Mrs. Michelle Obama • MacArthur Foundation The Chicago Community Trust • The Joyce Foundation • The JPB Foundation • Children First Fund

United Way of Metro Chicago

